A Marxist Perspective: The Animal Farm

The literary world has long given birth to works that give their own commentaries on the way society is built. They break down the superstructures of society and give it characters to play along with, unconsciously teaching us of the ways of the world.

George Orwell (Eric Arthur Blaire) is one genius to have crafted 'The Animal farm'. Generously lending itself to Marxist Criticism, it was created on the heels of World War II, England 1945. It was written to warn the people of Stalinism and expose the dangers of Totalitarianism. Even its characters reflect several important personalities at the time, an example being 'Old Major', a Middle White Boar that the Joneses exhibited under the name "Willingdon Beauty". He is 12 years of age, making him a senior among the animals, with an appearance of being "stout... but still a majestic-looking pig". He claims to "understand the nature of life on this earth as well as any animal now living".

Old Major actually represents Karl Marx, the Father of Communism. In the first part of the story, Old Major calls the farm animals to a meeting and starts a long speech about rebellion and revolution against humans, imparting his ideals about what he calls "Animalism" - which all humans are enemies and all animals are equal. This is similar to Marx's ideals and hypotheses about collective effort and rejection of the class and capitalist systems.

Another character is Mr. Jones, the farm caretaker. He is described as ruthless, always drunken and does not care much for the animals. He treats the animals harshly, rationing their food. This treatment leads to a revolt by the animals later on in the novel, as encouraged by Old Major's successors: Snowball and Napoleon- two pigs who make the ideals of Animalism concrete in 'The Seven Commandments of Animalism' and later on vie for the top ruling position on the farm.

Mr. Jones represents the higher ruling classes of society, mainly the owners of big companies and industries (as well as the government) that employ the lower working classes, practice exploitation and give low wages to their workers. Mr. Jones is often pictured as "drunken and lousy at his job" and shows how the higher ruling classes squander their earnings with luxury and barely do anything to compensate for their worker's hard labor. This is evident in most societies, especially in heavy industrialized countries. The employers do what they can to keep their profit to themselves and releasing only a little to give wages to their employees, thus making it hard for the workers to fend for themselves with the increasing prices of commodities. With the death of Old Major days after the first meeting at the barn, two pigs- Napoleon and Snowball- take it upon themselves to take over the governing of the animals. They concretize Animalism under seven commandments:

1. Whatever goes upon two legs is an enemy.
2. Whatever goes upon four legs, or has wings, is a friend.
3. No animal shall wear clothes.
4. No animal shall sleep in a bed with sheets.
5. No animal shall drink alcohol in excess.
6. No animal shall kill any other animal without cause.
7. All animals are equal.
